

GROUP CONTACT TRACING

In January, CDPH introduced the concept of group contact tracing. At that time, schools were encouraged to consider this quarantine strategy.

In the newest version of the ~~K2~~ guidance, CDPH strongly encourages schools to begin the transition to the group tracing strategy. CDC no longer recommends universal case investigation and contact tracing in the school setting. The organization recommends implementing appropriate mitigation measures as well as broad notification of potential exposure to COVID-19. The main three components of group tracing include:
